GREENSBORO TELEGRAM.

VOL. VI. NO. 144. GREENSBORO, N. C., FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1900. Price Five Cents

CONGER HAS BEEN HEARD FROM

THE SUSPENSE LITTLE RELIEVED.

Another Outbreak of the Boxers—Missionaries and Native Converts Butchered—No Advance on Pekin Until the Allied Forces are Increased—Russia Raises the Question of Her Rights.

By Wire to the Telegram.

New York, July 20.—The Journal correspondent at Shanghai cables under today's date: "An agent arrived here today from Tuan Tsinan with a message from Minister Conger, dated July 18th. Conger reported all safe in Pekin that day. The message, which was in cipher, has been transmitted to the State Department in Washington."

MINISTER CONGER SAFE.

Washington, July 20.—Minister Wu has received a cipher cablegram concerning Minister Conger. It is in reply to a message sent by Wu to the Chinese government some days ago asking about Conger's safety. The Chinese minister carried the cablegram to the State Department, where it was translated. The dispatch was sent from Shanghai by Taoti and reads as follows: "Your telegram was forwarded as requested. I send you the following reply received from Tsung Li Yamen: 'Your telegram received and the Secretary of State's telegram has been handed to Minister Conger. The British legation has been under continual shot and shell fire from the Chinese troops. Quick relief only can prevent general massacre.

His reply was in the cipher of the State Department, and its contents were of course unknown to Minister Wu. It is regarded by the Department of State as genuine, as forgery would seem impossible under the circumstances.

RUSSIA BECOMES BUMPTIOUS.

Vienna, July 20.—The Niene Freipresse says Russia has actively raised the question as to her right to command operations in China. England refuses to confide the command in Russia. France declines to concede the command to Japan. It is believed here that a German generalissimo will be appointed."

NO IMMEDIATE ADVANCE ON PEKIN.

Washington, July 20.—There will be no advance on Pekin by the allied army until a force of 80,000 troops is gathered. This is regarded as settled. The entire American contingent will not be able to assemble on Chinese soil before October 1st.

MORE MISSIONARIES BUTCHERED.

London, July 20.—A dispatch from Shanghai, received here this morning, reports that sixty missionaries and a hundred native converts have been massacred by the Boxers in the provinces of Tai Yuan and Shansi.

No Americans were among the butchered missionaries. They were all English.

CONTRADICTORY REPOTS.

Washington, July 20.—The State Department has issued the following bulletin: "The Secretary of State this morning received a dispatch from Consul Fowler at Cheefoo, dated at midnight of the 19th, saying the Shanghai papers of the 16th stated that all foreigners had been murdered. Consul Fowler wired the government demanding the truth of the report and received a reply from the governor stating that his courier left Pekin on the 11th, at which time all the foreigners were safe."

THE SUSPENSE LITTLE RELIEVED.

The dispatch concerning Minister Conger does little to relieve the nation's terrible suspense. The fact that the dispatch was not dated is a most significant circumstance. Long before it reached America the Minister and his family may have perished.

MARSHALS FOR THE RALLY.

Every Democrat Who Can Ride a Horse Invited to be in the Parade.

One of the features of the Democratic rally and picnic next Tuesday will be a parade, which, it is hoped, will be the largest ever seen in Greensboro. Every Democrat in Guilford county that can ride a horse is invited to be in the procession. The following gentlemen have been appointed to act as marshals for the occasion and take charge of the parade:

W. J. Blackburn, Chief.

Dr. G. A. Mebane,	George Vanstory,

DEATH OF MR. SAXTON.

The Remains Shipped to His Old Home in Buffalo.

Mr. Charles B. Saxton, who had been ill of fever for a few weeks, died last night at his boarding place on Morehead avenue. The remains were shipped to Buffalo, N. Y., today for nterment.

Mr. Saxton was a young man, being probably 25 or 30 years old, and was unmarried. He had been a resident of Greensboro for 18 months, coming here from Buffalo to engage in the manufacturing business. He was secretary of the Piedmont Shuttle and Bobbin Works, located north of the waterworks, beyond the city limits.

His father arrived some days ago.

Only One Day Left.

Tomorrow is the last day for registration for the coming election, and it is highly important that every white man see that his name is on the book. The registrars will be at the the polling places until sunset tomorrow, when the registration books will close. The following are the polling places in Greensboro:

A RICH AND RARE OCCASION.

HOW A REPUBLICAN WAS ROUTED.

Prof. Weatherly Goes Up Against Mr. Taylor and Falls Down--The Unconstitutionality of the Amendment and the Superior Advantages of the Negroes--A Dissertation on the Dispensary.

One of the richest joint discussions heard in many a political campaign took place at Walnut Grove school house, in Jamestown township, last night. It was a case of routing the enemy on his own ground.

The appointment was made by Prof. Jule Weatherly, who is doing some bushwhacking for the Republicans this year. Mr. Z. V. Taylor and several Democrats from Greensboro went up and asked for a division of time, which was granted.

Mr. Taylor spoke first, making a dignified, clear-cut and forceful speech, in which he struck the leaders of the Republican party some hard blows. Their methods right here in Guilford county were exposed and held up to the gaze of the intelligent white men present.

His plea for the amendment was very strong. He showed why it was necessary and explained its different provisions, putting special emphasis on the poll tax and educational clauses.

On account of the absence of a phonograph, it is impossible to report Prof. Weatherley's speech as it was delivered. A talking machine and a kodak would have given an accurate representation of his performance. He made no argument, his time being taken up in assertions. He spoke of the large number of jackasses who are supporting the amendment and admitted that the Democratic party paid the taxes of North Carolina. Considerable time was devoted to a vain effort to prove that there is, has been and never will be such a thing as negro domination. After saying the negroes enjoyed equal privileges with the white people, he delivered himself of a tirade of abuse against the negro, finally declaring that he was in favor of white supremacy.

Twice during his speech he was called down by Mr. Taylor and forced to admit to the crowd that he had misstated facts. One of these misstatements was to the effect that the Republican party repealed the law requiring a man to own 50 acres of land before he could vote for State Senator.

In his rejoinder Mr. Taylor did himself proud. He spoke for only 10 minutes, but he made every minute count. Not an inch of ground was left upon which his long-eared friend, as he termed his opponent, could stand. He read from Abraham Lincoln's utterance in opposition to negro suffrage, and when Prof. Weatherly said, "Lincoln saved this Union and freed the negroes," Mr. Taylor retorted, "Yes, he did save the Union and emancipate the negroes, but when the shackles of bondage were broken from the limbs of the sons of Africa the Republican party, to humiliate the Confederate soldier, bound every Southern white man in political slavery." This brought down the house, and the crowd, which had been against Mr. Taylor in the beginning, was with him from then until the end. The speaker was vigorously applauded, and it was apparent to every one present that votes had been made for the Democratic party.

Prof. Weatherly was completely floored. His wings had been cropped, and he was so disconcerted that his reply was a farce. He made no more assertions regarding the amendment, simply contenting himself with saying, "I have been told so and so," or "I have heard that such and such is the case." After floundering around a few minutes, he launched out on Bryan and free silver, dwelling on the erratic nature of the first and the absurdity of the latter. He then applied the reverse lever and spoke of how the oppressive trusts and money power were grinding down the people.

After Prof. Weatherly had concluded Mr. M. C. Holton arose to make a few remarks on the amendment, but after being called down by Mr. Taylor and admitting that he he was wrong, he entered upon a dissertation on the dispensary. He could find nothing in the Bible authorizing a dispensary and shed crocodile tears over the failing influence of the churches since engaging in the liquor business.

CONGER ALIVE.

He and the Members of the Legation Under Chinese Fire.

Special Dispatch to the Telegram.

Washington, July 20, 4 p m.—A cablegram just received by the Department of State reports Minister Conger and the members of the American legation alive at the British legation in Pekin, but under constant Chinese fire.

SPECIAL COMMISSIONER TO CHINA.

Mr. Rockhill Has Been Appointed by the President to Investigate and Report.

Washington, July 19.—W. W. Rockhill, director of the Bureau of American Republics, has been appointed special commissioner from this country to go to China and investigate and report upon the situation. For some reason, the officials do not care to have it known that Mr. Rockhill had been selected for this responsible duty. Within a week he will have a final conference with the President and Secretary Hay, and will leave for China. He proably will go to Vancouver and there take the Japanese line steamer for Yokohama, proceeding from that point to Shanghai.

Not until he arrives at Shanghai will Mr Rockhill undertake to outline his further course. His position is a peculiar one. He will be actually an ambassador in powers and so in the scope of his functions he will be akin to President Cleveland's paramount commissioner to Hawaii, Mr. Blount.

MR. BROOKS IN HIGH POINT.

He Speaks to a Crowd of Working Men, Making a Strong Argument.

One of the most effective speeches made in the county during the present campaign was made by Solicitor Brooks in High Point last night. He spoke to a crowd of between 400 and 500 people in front of McLeod's store and was given the closest attention.

There were many in the crowd who had not heard the amendment discussed, and Mr Brooks' treatment of the matter pleased them very much. He explained the various provisions in a clear and convincing manner, making his argument so plain that no one could fail to understand. The speech was one that is calculated to do much good.

The majority of the people present were working men, and they were very entusiastic.

The County Candidates.

The candidates spoke yesterday at Merry Oaks. The crowd was smaller than for several days past, though the people were interested and gave the speakers close attention.

Today they were at Brown Summit, in Madison township. A number of Greensboro people went up, leaving here at noon.

Character in the Hat.

"Show me how a man wears his hat and I will tell you what manner of man he is," said a writer in the Hatters' Gazette. "Notice yourself how he wears his headgear and you can make a fair estimate of his character. Select the man whose hat seems to have been made for him, and when he has set it squarely on his head, as if it were designed so to be, with never a tilt to the right nor left, fore or aft. He is a methodical and comfortable man with a rare endowment of common sense.

"Men whose hats are always too large for them are of reflective habits. They are careless of externals, and given to introspection. They are philosophical and likely to fall into fits of preoccupation. They are apt to ignore mere details. Conspicuously of this class was Mr. Gladstone, whose hat brim always showed a disposition to reach his ears.

"Men whose hats are always too small are vain and finical. The man who wears his hat drawn over his eyes may not be a 'crook,' but he is undoubtedly a 'schemer.' He excels in strategy, whether he sees his gift in an army campaign or in a coup on Wall street.

"Much more does the man who habitually wears his hat pushed off his forehead enjoy confidence of his fellow men. The man who wears his hat off his forehead is essentially frank. He is admired by those who do not agree with any of his views, for his straightforwardness; if nature has not gifted him with a singing voice he whistles. The man who places his hat on one side is independent, self-assertive; he is in danger of becoming vicious."

TRIED TO RUN LOCKE CRAIG.

But it Was No Go, and Col. Luske Was Turned Green With Rage.

Special to the Charlotte Observer.

Asheville, July 19.—The outrageous conduct of the Republicans at Flat Creek was repeated yesterday at Big Ivy. The premeditated character of the attack on Mr. Craig was very plain to those present. The same gang that created the trouble at Flat Creek were at Ivy. They and some tough citizens of Ivy got together as soon as Craig began to speak and interrupted and hurled abuse at him. The Democrats knew beforehand that this would be done, and that the game was to break up the meeting, and so refrained from answering in the way they otherwise would have done. Volleys of profane and vulgar language were hurled at the Democratic speaker and he stopped for ten minutes. One fellow started up to attack Mr. Craig, but was restrained. Mr. Craig took the matter very coolly, because he was determined that the Republicans should go through the canvass. It will be noticed that it is only in Republican precincts that these disturbances take place But for the restraining influence of Deputy Sheriff Reed there would have been a pistol fight at Flat Creek. The Democrats in Flat Creek and Ivy are very angry because of the impositions put on them who are in a small minority, and have reached the end of their patience. The Observer has frequently stated before these troubles actually arose that such would be the Republican plan. The exposure of the Gazette was sprung on Col. Lusk. The Citizen containing it was delivered to Mr. Craig before the speaking began. Every one else was ignorant of it. Mr. Craig asked the Colonel if he had any connection with the subsidizing of The Gazette. The Colonel promptly answered no; there was no such deal. Then Mr. Craig read the Somerville affidavit. The Colonel became so excited that he could not keep his seat. Mr. Craig then asked him if he knew of any deal with The Gazette, and he would not answer.

A RASH STATEMENT.

White People Incensed Over a Reported Utterance of the Postmaster of Ramseur.

The Telegram learns that considerable feeling has been worked up in the vicinity of Ramseur over a statement alleged to have been made by a Mr. Kimrey, the postmaster at Ramseur, in a speech a few nights ago. He is charged with saying in effect that any white man who would vote for the amendment was no better than a negro and should be made to take up his abode among the negroes.

His reported utterance so incensed the white people of Ramseur that a delegation called on the postmaster with the intention of wreaking vengeance on him. When he saw the earnestness of the people he denied having made the statement.

MYSTERIOUS.

Rappings Made By a Jealous Lover With a Tick-Tack.

The "spook" whose knockings have disturbed the home of the Hovey family in Charlestown, Mass., it has been found, is an old-fashioned tapper with a five-pound sounder operated with a string by a jealous lover of Miss Lilian Hovey. The tapper was attached to a hammock hook on the side of the house, and the operating string was carried through the broken fence at the rear of the yard. As the house is an old frame structure and scantily cross beamed, the planking formed an excellent conductor of the knocks. The jealous lover has pursued Miss Hovey with his attentions for some time, and the rappings are part of his plan of revenge for the rejection of his suit.

The other night at the Hovey house there were no more rappings, but one of the Spiritualists present assured the family that the wraith of an enemy was following the family, and he proceeded to exorcise it. Outside the police were waiting for the material "wraith" with his tick-tack device, but they waited in vain. There will probably be no more "manifestations."

TOMORROW IS THE LAST DAY FOR REGISTERING FOR THE COMING ELECTION.

BUTLER AND HOLTON TOGETHER

ARRANGING TO JUGGLE TICKETS.

Governor Russell is Against the Amendment because it is Unconstitutional But Says it Will be Adopted—Advises the Negroes to Let "This Amendment Thing Alone"—Has a Plan to Carry the State For McKinley.

Special Correspondence of the Telegram.

Raleigh, July 20.—Today the injunctions were served upon the corporation commission, signed by Judge Simonton, restraining it from assessing the three large systems of roads more than the 1898 assessment, until he shall have passed upon the matter: that is decide whether the assessment is at a greater valuation than that of other property.

The Republican and Populist leaders were again in conference here last night. Chairman Holton and Butler were together for hours. They read telegrams to each other. The current opinion was that they were arranging a joint State ticket. They refused to talk to Democrats. Of course it is no trouble to them to juggle their tickets. They are used to that performance. There is in fact, to a Democrat, no manner of difference now between a Populist and a Republican.

Cotton dealers here deny that the crop has been in the least injured by the present drought, which is the worst ever known in July, in all the annals of the weather bureau.

There are now ninety convicts at work in the shirt factory at the penitentiary. The officials there say that since the Federal convicts were taken away it is far more easy to maintain discipline: that the State convicts work better and are more obedient.

Raleigh's baseball team returned today from its Western tour. It won only one game out of four. Its players are not good batters. That is the trouble.

Governor Russell was interviewed last night. When asked if he would vote for the constitutional amendment, he replied:

"No, I shall not vote for it. I am against it. I am against it for many reasons. One good reason is enough. That one is that it is unconstitutional. It violates the Fifteenth Amendment.

"But it will be carried throught. It will be counted in. It will be adopted and unless restrained by the Federal courts, it will be put into operation I know that some of its lawyer advocates think they have got a "poser" in the South Carolina case where the Court of Appeals over-ruled Judge Goff, and so smile 'aloud' at the idea of its getting into the Federal Courts. Some of them are delighted with their expositions of this ruling. They are very gay in explaining it to us who knew all about it before they discovered it."

"How would you go about to get it in the United States Courts?"

"Oh, well! I am not answering conundrums this morning. When I am practicing law and you bring me a retainer suited to the occasion, perhaps I may tell you."

Then you think the amendment will be adopted?"

"With a free and fair vote it would be defeated, but of course, it will be adopted. There is no way to prevent. The Democratic managers have got passion and prejudice aroused and have established a reign of terror in many localities. This they started out to do and have done it.

"What do you think the negroes will do? Will they try to register and vote?"

"No, I do not believe they will to any great extent. My advice to the colored people is to let this amendment thing alone. They are helpless. Let them leave it to the whites. It is going to be adopted and remain so until set aside by the courts; and their opposition only makes bitterness against them and puts them in peril. I advised against the policy of permitting this amendment to be made a party issue. But the machine managers ordered the contrary. After they have wrecked the party, there will be nothing left but for us to try to gather up the fragments and go in to try to save the State for McKinley. If the property holding and conservative elements who favor McKinley will meet and bring out an electoral ticket composed of business men and no politicians, the Republican machine ticket should be taken down and the attempt made to give the State to McKinley.

C. D. Gold, a Democrat, while speaking at a school house in Wilson county Monday night was "egged" by Fusionists, who fled and escaped detection.

WEATHER SIGNS.

What the Animals Tell About Heat and Rain and Sunshine.

If swallows fly near the ground, there will be rainy or windy weather. If chicks seek shelter, it will be wet. If chickens and other fowls pick their feathers, the weather will be cloudy and damp. If, during severe frosts, roosters crow very early, the thermometer will rise. When ducks bathe and quack, there will be rain. When they are quiet there will be a thunderstorm. If a cat searches for a warm place, the weather will be colder. If it scratches a door, table or other object with its claws, there will be windy and snowy weather. If dogs roll in the winter, there will be snow; if in the summer, rain. If mice make their nests above the ground in ricks, the autumn and winter will be rainy. If they make their nests under ricks upon the ground, the spring will be fair: If they make their nests before the crop is reaped, rainy weather will begin in August.

Fish appear on the surface of water before rain, and go to the bottom before a strong wind. If smoke sinks to the ground when there is no wind in winter it will snow, and in summer it will rain. If smoke rises even during bad weather, fair weather will follow. If at sunset there are no clouds, the next day will be fair; if the sun sets in clouds, the next day will be cloudy, and perhaps rainy. If the setting sun is red, the next day there will be a strong wind. If the horns of the new moon are long and sharp then in winter the whole month will be cold, and in summer fair.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

This Principle Has Been Violated by Forcing the Dispensary Issue Before the County, and the People Are Appealed to to Sustain the Majority in Greensboro.

To the Editor of the Telegram:

There is no principle of our government more firmly fixed or more highly prized than the principle of local self-government. It permeates our whole system. State, county, township and municipality, and nothing in our system of government has done more for the development of our people. It creates patriotism and thought and awakens in the citizen the principle of sovereignity and makes him feel that, to the extent of his individuality, he is master of his own immediate surroundings, and is a principle dear to the people of Guilford county, for by it they established their own internal affairs as suited them best. Now, is that principle being violated, and if so who did it?

Greensboro, in its corporate capacity, thought proper to establish a dispensary in place of the open and licensed barroom. Will any deny this right except those immediately affected? Surely not. Would not Greensboro have the same right to dictate to hash Point, Rock Creek, or any other cernicility as they would have to say ply to Greensboro should do, but what Chimdition do we now find—the people of Greensboro appealing to the balance of the county to let her have her way of managing her own internal affairs, and we feel assured that when the people see and understand what is attempted to be done that they will vote to sustain what Greensboro has done and let them have the settlement of this matter as they may determine.

But, say some, the county is interested, as they get revenue. To those I would refer to section 15 of the Charter of Greensboro, which makes Greeensboro absolute controller of the liquor traffic, and under that charter the county cannot get one cent without Greensboro's consent. It is true that under the State law the county receives $100 for every license granted, but there can be no license granted at all until Greensboro, in her corporate capacity, says so. It is optional. But, as a matter of revenue, when Greensboro had eight barrooms the county received 16⅔ per cent. of $4,800, while under the dispensary they received 25 per cent. of $10,000, so there need be no friction on this point. Greensboro has done many things that has been of very great value to the county. It secured the location of two State schools here, the result of which has been to largely increase the county revenue, from increased values, etc. Now, as to the effects of the dispensary in curtailing drinking, I see in a late anti publication that the dispensary is selling as much as three bars in their most flush trade. This anti man should not publish this, it is not correct and it will not hurt us much to add with it—we had eight bars, where has the sale of the other five gone to? Pretty good reduction for the first lick.

One may notice there is being a great deal said about the detective or spy system. The old Blue Back said something about whose ox was gored, and that is the case he e. If a farmer was missing corn from his crib, or some one was pulling spikes from the rail or throwing rocks at the train I suppose detective work would be justified, but what a sympathy for one of these blind tiger fellows who is willfully violating the law, who travels back alleys, who loves darkness more than light, whose governing principle is to get all the money he can and not be caught, he makes friends only by furnishing that that gratifies a debased and often debauched appetite.

WM. LOVE.

A Mighty City.

The latest figures on the population of London present a total of 4,474,330 people within the corporate limits of the city. It is difficult to form any approximate conception of the extent of this great center. London is in round numbers as great as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia combined. London practically contains as many people in any state in our Union outside of New York and Pennsylvania. All the states admitted during the present generation combined would fall short of presenting a population equal to that of London. Its rate of growth is sufficiently steady, too, to make it certain that the tremendous margin by which the city's leadership in population is maintained will long be continued. It is a many-sided leadership, in addition to this, which London possesses, and he is a sanguine individual, indeed, who figures out that it will ever be lost.

The dairy industry of Iowa continues to grow. There are now 1,002 creameries in the state, against 954 in 1897 and 891 in 1896.

FRANCO-GERMAN SPIES.

How Two Jealous and Watchful Nations Conduct Their Secret Service.

(Berlin Correspondence.

The Franco-German frontier is watched more closely than any other boundary line on earth. This requires an unusually comprehensive spy system. The French spy reaches Germany and stops in the large town nearest to his field of operations. There his first care is to consult the doctors as to a good air cure, or a bath, or springs. Suppose his business is to report on the roads, bridges and resources of a mountainous district. He will need the air cure. Eliminating one by one the uninteresting districts, he at last causes his physician to indicate the spot that he has chosen. The good physician, always anxious for his commission, gladly recommends him to a proper pension. There, wandering about the hills, his story is: "I came to X—— in search of a tranquil mountain village for the air cure. Dr. Y—— recommended me to come here. If the climate suits me I shall stay a month."

Certainly the first quality of a good spy is that of knowing how to see and then remember. A crooked line and a few words traced hastily on a cigarette paper must recall the outlines of an earthworks. Hills, footpaths, springs, rich-looking farm houses, bridges, must be seen at a glance and indicated on a little piece of flimsy paper. He must indicate the crops of the neighborhood, the characteristics of small villages,, the lodging capacity of churches and other public buildings, the number of bakers, butchers and grain dealers, the situation of blacksmith shops and the condition of roads. It is easy to understand, for example, the interest attaching to a bridge. The enemy, in retreating, would not hesitate to blow it up. The spy must indicate how long it would take to repair it.

His day finished, the spy must secretly, in his bedroom, write his report and post it. If he imagines he is followed or suspected, he must stop work instantly, and even leave the country. In such case he returns to Paris, where he finds at the Etat Major, carefully gathered together, all the letters he has addressed to his fictitious correspondents. Aided by maps and the work of his predecesors in the field, it is his business to compose an up-to-date report on the region he has visited. Each little counts. Each month the Minister of War is just a little better informed on details that—when the great scientific European war breaks out—may win or lose a battle, a campaign, a people's destiny.

Such work may seem easier than it is in fact. Along the country roads, alone, with not a man in sight, the fear of being watched makes the most innocent note-taking a courageous exploit. Not to speak of country police, gamekeepers, foresters and patrol—whose chance appearance may cause him to destroy a morning's work—each simple passer-by becomes an object of suspicion. The surveillance around all fortified places is so severe as to tender going near them a real peril. Men have been shot inside forbidden grounds at dusk without an opportunity to say what they were doing.

No legend is more popular in Enrope than that of the aristocratic German or French officer who, in disguise, obtains work as a mason or carpenter inside the fort he wishes to observe. Yet few think of the practical impossibility of such a feat. How shall such men know the trades, the slang, the social customs and prejudices of foreign artisans? How can they talk of their relatives, their home village and the place they worked last? Most of this talk is romance pure and simple.

Nevertheless, I have heard of two instances of foreign officers pentrating fortified places in disguise. One was a Prussian lieutenant operating in Poland, where he pretended to be a hydraulic engineer in search of employment. He had been instructed to report upon a line of railway projected at a certain point in Poland. En route, perceiving that he was watched, he jumped from the train and made off for a woods that lay at a short distance; but he was soon caught by the pursuers. Of course, he had a story ready for the Russian police. He was buying wood and wished to inspect the forests of the neighborhood. On this they answered that there were no forests in the neighborhood, and he must accompany them to the police station of the nearst town. To this he objected, protesting that he had been informed of a vast amount of timber cut and stored near there. The Russian police admitted that such was the case—much to his satisfaction—but insisted on arresting him in spite of it. They rushed him off; but soon at a crossing the Russians stopped to hold a consultation. Then—lucky chance—they changed direction and walked to a fort he had not dreamed of being able to get into. It was luck, pure luck.

The other case was told to me by a French army doctor. "I have just held the hand of a brave dying man," he said. "He had crawled across the frontier with great difficulty, being in the last stages of dsease and starvation. When found he could scarcely make himself understood, but the night before he died he managed to tell us this much. He, an officer of the French army, had disguised himself as an Alsatian peasant and sought work in the neighborhood of the new German works that threatened the entrance to the Moselle Valley. He spoke German perfectly, and, as an Alsatian from beyond Belfort, he was not near enough to his pretended home for inquiry. He had to make himself ragged and dirty. He lived in a peasant's hut, and, after several months, got himself employed to carry wood into the fortress. Little by little he paced distance, made rude sketches with a nail on his bootlegs and located the water supply. He had just arranged—at a great peril—a hiding place in a pile of wood from which he might emerge at night to make an attempt on the artillery, kept with great secrecy in a corrugated iron shed, when he was taken down with fever. Nervous exhaustion helped the fever. He did not dare call in a doctor, who would see his white skin beneath his peasant's clothes. So he determined to make off while he had strength. The notes were too valuable to be lost. He saved them. He crawled into France with them before he died.

The Whirligig of Time.

If a primeval man could be brought to life and without warning placed in a parlor car of a train moving across the country at the rate of sixty miles an hour his bewilderment would scarcely be greater than that of the Rev. J. G. Paton, who has just returned to civilization after an absence of forty years. This reverend gentleman is an old man now, and when he left his native country two score years ago there was nothing of the push and progress that the last half of the century has produced.

Mr Paton knew San Francisco only as the centre and distributing point for a mining region that had only begun to develop. It was not the great city of the Golden Gate that was set before him as he stood on the deck of the home-coming steamer. In all the intervening years he had been among savages. He had ministered to their needs, while he undertook to bring them within the great light of Christianity, and for nearly half a century he had had no other associations.

The only men he knew were the black-skinned tribes that occupy the New Hebrides—as savage an aggregation of man-eaters as the world has ever known. In that Polynesian archipelago, under the equator, he had traveled from island to island, spreading the gospel, and the thought of home and country, although it may have come to him often, had never turned him from his work. There was not a moment that he was not in danger of death, for the natives among whom he moved are treacherous to the fullest limit. They have no knowledge of the meaning of lasting friendship, for the associate and ally of to-day may be the deadly enemy of to-morrow.

The steamship that brought him home was full of wonder to him. He had seen steamers from afar, and it had been his privilege to board one or two minor vessels. But when he left the New Hebrides in a sailing vessel to go to a port where he could get direct communication with home, he had no idea of the comforts of travel that could be provided in a voyage across the ocean. The very food that was put before him was almost strange, and was assuredly unnatural, for in his long stay among the islands he had become a confirmed vegetarian. His fellow passengers on the steamer ate their beef and their mutton with avidity, but Mr. Paton had to pass them by. His stomach revolted against even the simplest forms of flesh. Fish he was accustomed to, but even the fruits and vegetables came to him in a form he had never dreamed of.

"They brought me an apple," he said, "and I could not recognize it. I had forgotten that any such fruit ever existed. I ate it, just as those around me did, but the taste to me was strange and different from anything I could remember. It had been forty years since I had seen a pippin, and it is not wonderful that I had forgotten it."

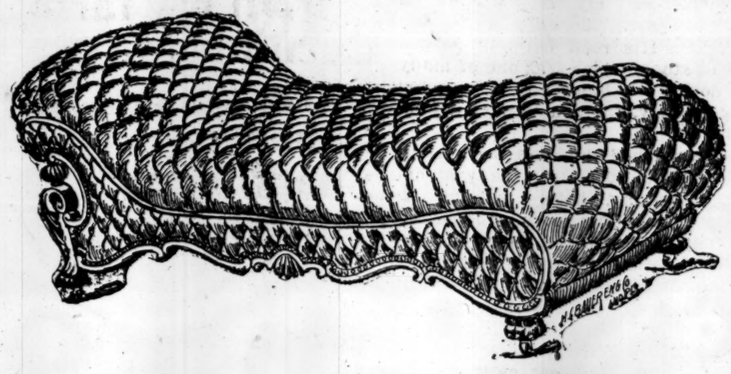
But when he passed the Golden Gate and the wonders of the harbor were unveiled to him, there came the first real appreciation of what he had separated himself from for so many years.

The Boer Army.

The Boer army in South Africa is drawn from a Dutch population of 165,000 in the two South Africa Republics. In other words, a people that could be set down in the Tenth and Twelfth Wards of Chicago is beating back the forces of Great Britain. Against this handful of republicans England has rallied the resources of an empire with a population of 347,673,000. She has gathered fighting men from all parts of the United Kingdom, with its 40,000,000 population; from her American colonies, with their 6,882,000 population; from Australia, with its 4,793,000, and from India, with its 221,000,000. She has picked and chosen her regiments from them all, yet she has not only failed to prevail over the tiny republics of South Africa, but has suffered repeated defeats at their hands.

A bushel of wheat or an equivalent amount of flour, can be shipped from Minneapolis to almost any point in Western Europe for about 20 cents.

Couches



Probably here is being displayed one of the finest line of couches in the city. They are in leather, pantasile and velours. In fact everything that is admirable in couches. You have only to see them and hear the prices to know that you buy for less here than elsewhere. No big salaried officers to pay here. My business is conducted on a money-saving basis, which means immense values for little money. While in the store ask to see Morris chairs, Rockers, Iron Beds and Felt Mattresses.

CATARRH: FORERUNNER OF CONSUMPTION.

Few realize what a deep-seated, obstinate disease Catarrh is, regarding it as a simple inflammation of the nose and throat, little or no attention is given it. But, however insignificant it may seem at first, it is serious and far-reaching in its results.

The foul secretions entering the circulation poison the entire system. The stomach, kidneys—in fact all the organs—feel the effect of this catarrhal poison, and when the lungs are reached its progress is rapid and destructive, and finally ends in consumption.

It frequently happens that the senses of hearing and smell are in part or entirely lost, the soft bones of the nose eaten into and destroyed, causing intense suffering and greatly disfiguring the face. While sprays, washes and salves may give temporary relief, no permanent benefit can be expected from such treatment.

CATARRH IS A CONSTITUTIONAL OR BLOOD DISEASE, and far beyond the reach of mere local remedies. Those who rely upon them for a cure lose valuable time, meet with disappointment and allow the disease to take firmer hold. Only a real blood remedy can reach this troublesome and dangerous disease.

S. S. S cures Catarrh because it first cleanses and builds up the blood, purifies it, makes it rich and healthy, stimulates and puts new life into the sluggish worn-out organs, and thus relieves the system of all poisonous accumulations.

Mrs. Josephine Polhill, of Due West, S. C., writes: "I had Catarrh, which became so deep-seated that I was entirely deaf in one ear, and all inside of my nose, including part of the bone, sloughed off. When the disease had gone this far the physician gave me up as incurable. I determined to try S. S. S. as a last resort, and began to improve at once. It seemed to get at the seat of the disease, and after a few weeks' treatment I was entirely cured, and for more than seven years have had no sign of the disease."

S. S. S. is made of roots, herbs and barks of wonderful tonical and purifying properties. It is the only vegetable blood purifier known, and a certain and safe cure for all blood troubles. Send for our book on Blood and Skin Diseases, and at the same time write our physicians about your case. They will cheerfully give you any information or advice wanted. We make no charge for this.

CORN.

The brilliant New York Sun is the most conspicuous patron of corn in this country, and as such has been carefully watching the present crop. It finds that the rains which fell the first of this week over the corn section of Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, added to the wealth of the land, as estimated by the corn market of Monday, about one million dollars. The rains have assured the country's crop for this year, says the Sun, and we shall produce about two and a half billion bushels. Of the consumption of the article its illustrious patron says:

In the fiscal year just ended our country exported nearly, 300,000,000 bushels of corn, whereas but a few years ago we exported none at all. A great and growing use for the staple has been been stimulated among foreign consumers. Formerly regarded as a product whose surplus could hardly be disposed of, it is now eagerly sought for in nearly all the grain markets of the world.

There is no more useful article grown than our Indian corn, and most everybody is fond of it in one shape or another. The chances are that the man who doesn't like corn bread will take an ear of green corn with the greatest relish. The Europeans who used to care nothing for our corn bread are beginning to be fond of it, and by and by its excellent qualities, combined with its cheapness, will make it a favorite there as here.

We would not be surprised if, when the allied powers begin to behead the Chinese conspirators, they are compelled to begin with the gay Mr. Li Hung Chang.

Artificial Coal.

The latest advance in practical science is artificial coal. Much speculation has been indulged in by unduly apprehensive persons as to what humanity would do for fuel when the world's coal is gone.

Now, centuries before it will actually be needed, a substitute has been made. A workman named Montag, residing in Mannheim, has manufactured artificial coal, the component parts being earth and mineral residual substances. The exact composition is a secret. It is reported that the heat producing properties of the artiificial coal are wonderful. A kilogramme when burned leaves only nine pennyweight of ashes.

Eating and Weight.

It has been seriously asserted by many people that we are naturally lighter after a meal, and they have even gone the length of explaining this by the amount of gas that is developed from the food. Average observations, however, show that we lose three pounds six ounces between night and morning; that we gain one pound and twelve ounces by breakfast; that we again lose 14 ounces before lunch; that lunch puts on an average of one pound; that we again lose during the afternoon an average of 10 ounces; but that an ordinary dinner to healthy persons adds two pounds and two ounces to their weight.

THE MAGIC PLOW.

It Was Made for a Farmer by Underground Smiths.

A farmer one day left his home, in the bright early morning, to go into his fields. His road led him past a cross of stone, which was one of many that dotted the landscape in that far away country, the Scandanavian Peninsula.

As he reached the cross he knelt a few moments in prayer, as was his wont every day, before passing it. But as he rose this morning from his customary worship he saw on the base of the rocks a strange looking insect that attracted his attention by its brilliant color. Nor was that all. The little creature seemed very restless, running about here and there over the cross, and at its foot, as if it were trying to leave the spot, but was unable to do so. Back and forth, back and forth, it went, but it got no farther than the base, when it seemed irresistibly drawn back again.

For some little time the farmer watched the insect; then he went his way to his fields and forgot all about the incident. But the next morning it was recalled to him, for on his way to his work he saw it again, as he knelt at the cross, still running about here and there as if it were still trying to get away but could not.

The farmer thought this very strange, and recalling all the stories that he had heard from his grandfather, while he was yet a child, he wondered if there were any truth in them.

"Can it be," he thought, "that this creature is one of those that live in the heart of the earth? Perhaps it came, unwittingly, too near the cross, and now it can not get away."

So he thought for a moment, and the next instant he scoffed at the idea; and leaving the spot, forgetful of his customary prayer, he hastened to his labor.

The next morning, however, and the next and the next he saw the same thing at the cross, and each day his curiosity grew stronger and stronger. Unable at last to bear it, he stood at the rock with a determination to see if it were but an ordinary insect, or a being not of the upper earth. Breathing a prayer and calling the name of Diety, he caught the beautifully colored thing in his hand. But it did not yield to his touch as he had expected: instead it seemed to resist him with supernatural force and clung to the rock with every atom of strength it possessed.

The farmer, however, gave a strong pull and found that he held by the hair a creature in appearance like a man, but only about six inches in length, while it screamed and kicked in a most energetic manner.

"Ho! ho! friend!" the farmer cried, "this is your trick, is it? Now tell me who are you and what trade you know that enables you to earn your living in the world."

The little one, however, would not answer his questions, but continued to scream and struggle with all his might.

"Be still, little one," the farmer cried; "be still and answer my questions, and I will give you your freedom."

But all his threats and pleadings availed him nothing; the little creature remained as silent as a child that knows not how to speak.

"So be it," the farmer said at last, when he found his efforts unavailing; "we will see to what tune you'll sing by and by."

And with these words he turned back to his house with the little one, clapped him into a huge sotty iron pot, put the cover on it, and carried it into the cold cellar. There he placed a heavy rock upon the lid, and as he left he cried out:

"Remain there in the cold and the dark until you are ready to answer civil questions."

Twice a week the farmer visited his prisoner, but with no result. So six weeks passed by, and one day the little one begged to be released, promising to answer all questions.

"First, then, tell me who you are, and how you got where I found you," the farmer said.

"You have guessed it as well as I can tell you," the black one said. "I am one of those that live far down in the earth. We feed the great central fire; that is why I am so black. One day I came up to earth, and happened to pass near the cross. You know that when that happens we cannot get away and are compelled to become visible. I prayed to attract attention in my natural form, so took that of the insect you noticed. Well, you know the rest. Now let me go if you are honest."

"You have told me all truly, I believe. But I have heard that you are also clever smiths. Is that so?"

"Yes, it is true."

"Well, then, you should give me a present before I let you go; would that not be fair?"

"Yes, yes," eagerly said the black one, "ask what you will, gold, silver, jewels, fine cloths or furniture. It shall be yours in an instant."

"All that you mention I do not want; but since you are clever smiths, make me a plow so light that the smallest foal may draw it and not be tired."

"Agreed! But free me now!"

"There! Go!"

The minute after the great pot was uncovered the little being disappeared, but so suddenly that the farmer almost believed that he had been dreaming.

In the morning, however, in the yard outside the cabin door, the farmer found a new plow. He fastened his dog to it, much to the amusement of his neighbors, but their astonishment was great to see him pull it without effect or weariness.

Growth of Insurance.

There were fire insurance societies in existence before the nineteenth century began, but it was not until comparatively recent years that they acquired the growth which entitled them to be considered as one of the really notable institutions of our age. In 1782 the principal of fire insurance began to make headway in England, but its development was hampered for a while owing to the fact that the government imposed an annual duty of 1s. 6d. on every £100 worth of goods insured. This amount gradually increased until in 1816 it amounted to 3s., and at that point it remained until 1869, when it was removed altogether. It is estimated that the whole premium income of British fire insurance offices is at present at least £10,000,000, and that the amount insured is between £4,000,000,000 and £5,000,000,000.

In the United States fire insurance has made vast strides within the last quarter of a century, the result being that to-day there are agents of all the leading companies in every town and almost in every village throughout the country. During 1897 the total cash income of fire insurance companies doing business in this country was $176,654,429, and the risks written during that year amounted to $16,500,000,000. In many ways the popularization of this sound principle has proved helpful to all classes of the people, and when the history of the nineteenth century is written there is little doubt that the historian will point to it as one of the most marked evidences of modern progress.

An Electrical Marriage.

The story of an electrical marriage comes from Kentucky. The bridegroom was a private of Troop H, of the Ninth U. S. Cavalry stationed at Fort Wingate, New Mexico, and the bride was Lizzie Hummons, of Winchester, Ky. Both parties are colored. A local minister officiated at the Kentucky end of the line and the Ninth Cavalry at the other. Both telegraph and telephone were called into requisition, the distance between the two contracting parties being 1,715 miles. It is said that the electrical ceremony cost $26.15, not including the fee of the preacher, the license and other incidentals.

Advance in Medicine.

Although it is wise to not accept the wonderful new medical discoveries too hastily the science is indeed making wonderful advance. We have only to note a few of the greater advances in the prevention and cure of disease to be abundantly convinced of this fact. The discoveries of new principles and their adaptation to practice have followed the usual laws of interdependent conditions and consistency of general adaptation. In these respects medicine and surgery have worked together along parallel lines of discovery and with equal aims in the high duty of alleviating human suffering. As a general result life has been prolonged and diseases heretofore believed to be incurable are now perfectly amenable to successful treatment.

The hitherto hidden regions which were considered sacred against invasion by the knife are now explored with impunity, and the most extensive and complicated resulting wound quickly and safely healed. Every organ of the body has yielded its willing allegiance to the leading principle upon which the glorious advancing surgery of the present day is founded. Only within the past two years the entire stomach has been successfully extirpated, the severed ends of the intestinal tract joined together, and all the former theories of digestion upset by proving that the organ in question was not essential to prolonged life or progressive nutrition.

The demonstration of the microbe theory of disease causation has opened up a wide field for future inquiry. It is now apparently well proven that many of the lower micro-organisms hold the balance of power with the highest creations in determining the life limit. In many of the higher diseases there is a special microbe for each. The familiar examples are those of typhoid, malarial and yellow fevers, dyphtheria, chlora and pulmonary consumption. All of these are now being treated on a more intelligent basis than ever before. Their causes being known, their prevention and cure are mere logical sequences. The promise is for even better results in staying pestilence, in decreasing the death rate and in adding to the length of human life. The history of the past is the best prediction for the future. In the light of recent events we have no right to assume that there is any disease so incurable to-day which may not in the near to-morrow be triumphantly vanquished by its remedy.

During the last six years the average price of wheat in the local market was 61 cents a bushel, which would give the farmer a clear profit of 7 cents. It costs, on an average, 54 cents a bushel to raise wheat.

FAMOUS BANDITS' BOOTY

The Reynolds Brothers of Civil War Fame Headed the Outlaws, Who Rode Through the Southwest Leaving a Trail of Blood and Ruin.

After a lifetime spent in fruitless search for gold, the most famous hermit in Colorado has passed away.

At the very last he had found, but too late, the treasure he sought, but too frail to survie the shock of his discovery the old man died before he was even able to tell the secret hiding place that thirty years' search had at last revealed to him. So the treasure of Elk Creek still lies buried.

The story of the hidden treasure is famous throughout the Rockies.

Jim and John Reynolds gathered together in 1863 a band of two hundred daring men and marched through Texas and New Mexico. They carried the Confederate flag, and boasted that they would wrest Colorado from the Union or waste its lands with warfare. The attempt to capture the State failed, but the threat to leave a trail of blood behind them was carried out.

Once they held up a stage coach, killed the driver and passengers, and escaped with a rich haul of gold and nuggets.

A few weeks later they overtook a wagon train. They shot the horses, massacred the passengers, and looted the stage of more than $60,000.

At this time they learned that they were being hotly pursued by troops from Denver under Colonel Chivington.

Fearing to keep the immense treasure longer in their possession, they sought a massive peak now known as the Lion's Head, and at dead of night, with gloomy brows and ghostly whisperings, they buried the vast treasure.

The cave was marked by sticking a bowie knife in a pine tree, breaking off the handle, and leaving the blade pointing to the mouth of the cave.

Upon the face of a high cliff, with towering walls of granite upon one side, and a deep and dark abyss upon the other, the bandits were at last brought to bay.

Escape was impossible.

There was a fierce struggle, but a short one. The bandits were lined up with their backs to the edge of the cliff, their arms bound behind them, and one by one were shot in the breast, while the lifeless bodies fell down, down, down into the byss below.

(John Reynolds fell. The soldiers, thinking him dead, let him lie.)

Of all the miners who tried to locate the gold, none succeeded. But early in the 'seventies Anton Glasmann took up a claim near the head waters of Elk Creek, and in the shadow of the Lion's Head built himself a cabin.

Then he became a hermit.

Not many days ago the old hermit came into the little village of Pine Grove, Col., and in great excitement, but with more rationality than he had displayed for years, showed nuggets and gold coins of great value, and told the villagers that he had at last found the treasure. That same evening he took the train for Denver, and early the next morning was upon the streets inquiring his way to a notary office. His queer, bent form, his battered sombrero and muffled throat, his peering eyes and shuffling gait, attracted much attention. Some one led him to the office of a notary public. The old man seemed spent and weary. He sank into a chair and began eagerly to try to pour out an incoherent story. There was a pause, a struggle, the gray head sank forward upon the tired breast, and the quest for treasure was ended. Anton Glasmann was dead with his secret upon his lips.

Glass by Electricity.

A lamp chimney manufacturer in Anderson, Ind., has discovered a new process of melting the sand used in glass making. While passing through his plant he saw a globe on an arc light break, and a piece of glass fell on the carbon. It was only a second until it was reduced to a liquid. He directed the construction of a big vat with side and bottom composed of carbon, over which he could turn a current. An arrangement was made to run sand through this vat. It worked perfectly, and the best molten glass is being turned out in as many seconds, as it required hours for the old fuels to melt it. The process has been patented.

THE UNION AFTER FESPERMAN.

Wants to Know Why he has Gone Into Politics—The Trial of Will Kell for Murdering his Sweetheart.

Correspondence of the Telegram.

Charlotte, July 20—Apropos of the Mill News' bold editorial charging a prostitution of the principles of true labor unions, a letter has been published here signed by the recording secretary of lodge 113, in which it is stated that the Southern Workman published here by E. L. Fesperman will be boycotted for the reason that Fesperman has come out editorially against the amendment after, it is claimed, he had pledged himself to keep his paper out of political questions. The writer of the letter furthur states that not a union man in Charlotte is against the amendment. An explanation has been asked from Fesperman by Lodge No. 113 whence the letter comes.

The trial of Wm. Kell, the murderer of Annie Ardrey, was called at 10 o'clock this morning. Kell is the negro who killed Annie Ardrey about 10 days ago while the parties were returning from church. The girl was accompanied by another boy which seems to have displeased Kell who made a remark eliciting a rebuke from the girl whereupon Kell shot her on the spot. A special venire of 50 men was summoned to select a jury from.

The remains of Capt. J. N. Bohannon who died at the hospital here while he was returning home, were carried to Hickory yesterday for burial.

Wheeler Asks to be Sent to China.

Chicago, July 19.—General Joseph Wheeler, commanding the Department of the Lakes, has asked the War Department to assist him to duty in China. Speaking of his application to-night, General Wheeler said:

"The application was filed before I assumed command of this department. I think it is the duty of everyone who holds a commission in the United States army to desire active service when it can be accorded to him."

Is That What is Wanted?

Concord Standard.

We see editorial squibs asserting that if Mr. Bryan becomes President there will be no Hannas it it, but that he will himself be President. Have the Democrats learned since Cleveland's presidency that that is what they want?

CHILDREN ALOFT ON SPEARS.

The Horrible Tale of a Chinese Merchant Concerning the Pekin Massacre.

London, July 20.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express, says: "Intense indignation is felt here at the horrors which the British in Hong Kong have accorded Li Hung Chang, who is looked upon in Shanghai as the originator of the whole fiendish anti-foreign plot.

"A Chinese merchant, who has just arrived from Pekin, gives horrible details of the massacre. He says he saw European women hauled into the streets by shrieking Boxers, who stripped them and hacked them to pieces. Their dissevered limbs were tossed to the crowd and carried off with howls of triumph. Some were already dead, having been shot by foreign civilians!

"He says he saw Chinese soldiers carrying the bodies of white children aloft on their spears, while their companions shot at the bodies. He gives other details too horrible to be particularized here.

"It seems that the Boxer leaders had organized a plan, including the offering of rewards and rich loot for the annihilation of Europeans throughout China, and that Prince Tuan's generals have been emphasing the opportunity the soldiers have of seizing the bodies of white women."

Sound of Cannonading.

Though the distance is not less than thirty miles, the sound of firing at Ladysmith is said to be so plainly heard at Estcourt that the report of heavy guns (supposed to be the two naval 4.7-inch guns, followed by the bursting of lyddite shells) can be easily distinguished above those of the Boer forty-pounders and the smaller guns on both sides.

A medical expert contends that out of 1,000 girls studying the piano before the age of twelve about 600 are afflicted with nervous troubles in later life.

A central station for the production of acetylene gas is being tested at Tata-Tovoros, Hungary, a city of 12,000 inhabitants. Five miles of pipe covers the city and furnishes gas to 158 street lights and 250 burners in houses.

Clouds that move in a contrary direction to that of the surface current indicate a change of weather, because they prove the existence of two air currents, one warm and the other cold, and the mingling of these frequently causes rain.

LOVE MADE HIM A SUICIDE.

Ham, a Monkey, Starves Himself to Death.

HAD A FINE EDUCATION,

His Mistress Went Away For a Month and When She Returned It Was Only in Time to Witness the Funeral Services.

Nature made Ham, Jr., a monkey. Education made him all but a man.

Love made him a suicide.

He died for love of Mme. d'Osta, who had taught him to use a knife and fork and napkin, to dress and undress, to sleep in a bed, to take medicine, to say "yes," "no," and "mamma."

That was the word he spoke oftenest—"mamma." He wailed it continually during his last days, when the choicest delicacies failed to shake his resolve to die by starvation. It was his last cry, as he took a photograph from under his pillow and held it before his glazing eyes.

The picture was that of Mme. d'Osta, for she was "mamma."

Ham, Jr., learned to play many parts. He would impersonate a laborer smoking his pipe, an old woman sipping her tea, a gourmet tasting his wine, a student reading his book, a politician haranguing his constituents.

But that was all mimicry.

He was an orang-outang, one of a batch of fifteen bought in Borneo three years ago by Captain d'Osta.

Two years ago his education was begun. This important work was intrusted to Mme. d'Osta.

Table manners, for example. How might ages of heredity be overcome to make a monkey eat with a spoon? Mme. d'Osta devised a deep, narrow cup, into which Ham, Jr., could not insert his hand.

Very good. Ham, Jr.'s, intelligence prompted him to use a spoon to extract his food from the cup. But heredity inspired him to drop each spoonful on the table and convey it thence to his mouth with his hands.

Mme. d'Osta procured the services of a child and kept it hungry against the monkey's meal times. It was instructed to snatch away and eat every spoonful of food that Ham, Jr., dumped upon the table, and it obeyed. Ham, Jr., was first mystified, then pained, then indignant. Then he chattered with wrath. It was no use. At the other side of the table his beloved mistress was eating daintily with a spoon, and the greedy child had no opportunity to snatch away a small morsel.

(An after dinner smoke.)

Ham, Jr., elevated his eyebrows half a dozen times with great rapidity, and tried the experiment of carrying a spoonful from the cup direct to his mouth.

Eureka! The greedy child was foiled. From that moment Ham, Jr., ate with a spoon.

Love claimed him throughout every branch of his education. It was a triumph for him when he learned to articulate "yes" and "no" with a full knowledge of their meaning, but the greatest triumph of all when he found the trick of saying "mamma."

A month ago Mme. d'Osta was obliged to leave Ham, Jr., in Baltimore while she accompanied the circus to Brooklyn. It was deemed unwise to allow him to travel, because he could not be kept in an even temperature, so he was taken to the Bostock menagerie in Atlantic City.

Ham, Jr., cowered in his cage all day, crying "Mamma! Mamma!" His food remained untasted. The head keeper sent for Dr. Somers, of No. 2012 Pacific street.

Dr. Somers could not detect any cause for the monkey's illness. Ham, Jr., could not describe his symptoms. He could only say "Mamma! Mamma!"

The Cost of War.

In the War of the Rebellion 110,070 were killed in action or died of wounds and 200,000 died of disease contracted in service, making a total amounting to about 15½ per cent. of the enlistment. The reports to the Adjutant General's office up to October 3 of last year showed that 280 out of an enlistment of 274,717 were actually killed in the Spanish-American war. The large total of pension applications represents the ingenous activity of the pension attorney or meddlement in official records. While every man who faithfully served his country and was injured in her service deserves the recompense that the government makes to her defenders, there is no question that the pension list of the Spanish-American war calls for the closest scrutiny. To trace death from disease or injuries or exposure in war is a difficult matter, even when no longer time than one or two years has elapsed. And the pension list will continue to grow. Whatever lack of care one may have shown in the war, the neglect of the simplest sanitary precautions, if he died subsequently, some not overscrupulous pension attorney my be found to push a claim against the government in behalf of his dependents. Yet when one has actually died in the service, the meagre pension of the government is not adequate recompense for the loss of his services. Looked at from either point of view, war is cruel and wasteful, and it opens the door to all sorts of evil consequences, forcseen and unforeseen.

Why do we surpass others? Because we carry a large stock to select from of all the up-to-date Furniture, where you can at all times find just what you want at low prices. In fact our stock is so large and we sell so many goods that we have to employ good salesmen to wait on our trade. We are now selling at a sacrifice some fine goods we are overstocked in, such as Fancy Centre Tables, Handsome Chiffoniers, Beautiful Rockers and Baby Carriages and Go-Carts. We must close them out and now is the time for bargains. Call in and see if ye cant interest you awhile in the Big Furniture Store, next door to the Express Office.

PREVENTED A TRAGEDY.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had kept her awake every night. She tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

Women and Work.

Many people deplore the increasing employment of women in the industries, and all sorts of evil is predicted as an ultimate consequence of the industrial revolution that has been going on in this direction for a number of years. A St. Paul minister looks at it almost seriously, and comments in this wise: "It was in savage times that woman was the slave and served her master in menial tasks. We are fast on the road to a new savagery. The problem began when the discovery of machinery and factory system took the place of the man and the tool. Greedy employes bade the delicate fingers of women and the dimpled hand of childhood grasp the fallen task. I have watched a woman and a cow together dragging a heavy load in Europe. I have seen the haggard faces of the factory girls here and there. God never intended women to look like that. But economic conditions have no chivalry, and human avarice has no sense of honor. The working women in this country now number 4,000,000, between the ages of 14 and 25. The great fact of the last decade, however, is the enormous increase among them of girls under 18 years of age. In the clothing trades alone the increase has been 233 per cent.; in cotton and woolen goods, 138 per cent." There is much in this caustic comment to attract the attention of the thoughful, and more in the fact that inventions have increased the productive capacity of men more than 100 per cent.

A Happy Family.

STORY OF A SLAVE.

To be bound hand and foot for yeasr by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle-working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, rundown people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by C. E. drogist.

I WISH TO INFORM YOU that I have moved my shoe shop to No. 206 South Davie street, between John J. Phoenix and C. A. Clapp's stores, opposite the market house, where I will do first class work using only the best stock and save you ten per cent in price. L. B. Albertson.

THE WEATHER.

For North Carolina: Fair tonight, Saturday local rains.

Highest temperature at Greensboro past twenty-four hours ending eight o'clock this morning 96, lowest 74.

THE LAST DAY OF GRACE.

Tomorrow Will Seal the Fate of Those Whose Names Are Not on the Registration Books.

Mr. T. J. McAdoo went to Reidsville this afternoon.

A new sprinkler is doing service on the dusty streets.

Mr. O F. Pearce is confined to his home by sicknes He has erysipelas.

"When this cruel campaign is over," sang a Republican candidate today.

Remember that after tomorrow it will be too late to register for the coming election.

If you are not registered by sunset tomorrow you cannot vote in the greatest election ever held in the State.

Carpenters this morning began the work of repairing P. E. Causey & Co's store, which was damaged by fire last Saturday night.

The members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. in this city are contemplating uniting with the Juniors of Winston-Salem and running an excursion to Norfolk.

The manager of the Gate City Band, Mr. J. G. Fowler, has closed a contract to furnish music for the big Democratic rally and barbecue in Burlington on the 31st.

The encampment of wandering horse-traders, of which mention was made yesterday, is to be the scene of a wedding tonight. A big feast will follow the ceremony, $35 worth of cakes and pies baving been purchased from one bakery in the city today.

Dramatic Osculation.

"Embraces and kisses are rehearsed with the extremest care," writes Franklin Fyles, of "The Rehearsal of a play," in the January number of the Ladies' Home Journal. "They must have an impulsive manner. They must look sufficiently fervid. It is a curious sight—that of two players who are to express the ardent love which Shakespeare has written for his 'Romeo' and 'Juliet,' but who at rehearsal, in modern clothes and no accessories of glamor, practice a kiss as mechanically and as unfeelingly as though it were—as it is then—utterly devoid of sentiment. There must be no hesitation nor clumsiness. Romeo is not permitted to decide whether to throw both arms around his sweetheart or only one, or which. Nor may Juliet be shy or forward, yielding or resisting as she chooses. The director will place their arms for them if they do not themselves take a picturesque exhibit of tenderness. nd the kiss. Shall it be delivered by the wooer on the lips of the won, or cheek? That question is considered and settled. Are kisses on the stage genuine? Well, not at rehearsals, except, perhaps, once or twice to show the real effect fully. An actress would resent a real kiss at a rehearsal except when necessary. For the satisfaction of natural curiosity on that point it may be told right here that most of the kisses in the public performance of plays are natural ki[illegible]"

BEAR IN MIND THAT THE REGISTRATION BOOKS CLOSE TOMORROW AT SUNSET.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY A PIANO.

We have quite a number of elegant pianos in the depot for which we have no room. We are instructed by the factory to close out the whole lot in order to save storage and shipping expenses. We will sell every one of them before August the 1st regardless of former prices. If you want the best piano on earth at your own price and terms come or write at once.
